

Original Image

Image Difference

run-length encoding in each image corresponds to lines in the world. We call the lines in the world the lines in the image, corresponding to lines in the image.

(1) A camera, with some imagelines, of worldlines; (2) the same camera, oriented vertically corresponding to the rightmost image line; (3) the same camera, oriented to show a worldline corresponding to the next imageline.